

Building a Strong and Visible Graduate Culture

Patrick S. Osmer

Vice Provost for Graduate Studies and Dean of the Graduate School

The Challenges

- Graduate education is decentralized by its very nature
- At Ohio State, 100+ graduate programs and 10,000 students span the entire campus
 - Arts & Sciences
 - Professional Colleges
 - Health Sciences
 - All with their own cultures

Challenges, cont.

- Graduate constituencies & audiences
 - Program level
 - Frequent, program-related interactions
 - College level
 - Policy and multi-program matters
 - University level
 - Interactions with undergraduate education, research, other Academic Affairs and Vice Presidential units
 - External
 - Regents, State, National
 - Media

Main Principles

- Mission – Quality
 - Strategic leadership, quality, service
- Strategic leadership and success depends upon partnerships
 - At Ohio State, tripartite arrangement of Academic Affairs (including Institutional Research and Planning), Colleges, Graduate School
- Visibility is required
 - To get things done
 - To inform all constituencies

The Past Five Years at Ohio State

- Attention started turning from undergraduate to graduate side
- Fiscal considerations
- Research
- Driven by desire to increase
 - quality (mission)
 - attractiveness to best graduate students and faculty (visibility)
 - focus (investment/disinvestment)

Activities & Initiatives

- Review of the Graduate School
- Review of funding of graduate education
- Doctoral Program Review
- Task Forces on Life and Environmental Sciences
 - Action plan
- New Master's Programs & Enrollment Planning

Doctoral Program Review (Quality)

- Foundation for on-going efforts
- Results
- Process was key
 - Done in partnership with the colleges
 - Based on NRC quantitative data
 - Open about the process, met personally with deans, several opportunities for deans to respond
 - All data and reports are posted publicly (transparency and openness) (see gradsch.osu.edu)
 - Developing main messages before release of report
 - “Constructive, not punitive”

Building Links (Visibility)

- Key hire – Director of GS Recruitment and Diversity Initiatives
- Building links to improve effectiveness
 - GS connects with everything
 - But has few of its own resources
- Strategic Communications
 - Established quarterly meetings and regular newsletter; new website underway; connected with university communications
 - Restructured Graduate Council

Role as Vice Provost of Graduate Studies (strategic leadership)

- Part of Provost's leadership team
- Council of Deans
 - Provide ways to work beyond the decentralized framework of graduate education
